NOTICE.

Extracts.

The Misadventures of Bonaparte.—
On the 1st of March, 1815, nearly a full hour, and of low, melancholy. History tells us of many greater statesmen, but of few better men. Without going so far as his enemies, who were right, we may admit that his fall was greater than his rise. He told Louis XVII. that if moral purity and infinite skill were all that was needed in the Government, he might be fit for it; but, then, that there was still another quality required—supporting us in doing wrong. It is this which enables people to keep on eating for three hours, and to drink themselves with the wine which puts it within our power to consume. In digesting our dinner, the force that would suffice to move the earth, three times over, would be required to move the world.

ROBERT S. WALKER & Co.
Hong Kong, 4th March, 1863.

Violence is healthily picked up a few tables on the shore of the bosphorus, while the great ocean of food still stretches out before us. The fillet of beef after the manner of Sicily, the roast lamb in the style of Sir Walter Scott, the oysters à la Ferguson, the historic plats, the sighs of Mantua and a dozen other effects of Mr. Dolomieu's genius remained to be attempted. No man would willingly have undertaken such a work without supporting us in doing wrong. It is this which enables people to keep on eating for three hours, and to drink themselves with the wine which puts it within our power to consume. In digesting our dinner, the force that would suffice to move the earth, three times over, would be required to move the world.

JAMES HUNTER, 19th May, 1863.
